

OCCUPATIONAL HEALTH PARTNERS

The purpose of Occupational Health Partners is to maintain the health of employees, prevent disease and treat the results of occupational diseases or accidents. Our job is to partner with your company to promote health and safety in the workplace, reduce costs, increase productivity and help your employees become healthier people.

Managing Your Risks at Work

Work affects health, and health affects work, so in order for your business to operate at full capacity, it's important to manage your occupational and environmental health risks. It sounds simple, but it's easier said than done. There are many common occupational hazards that occur either suddenly or over a period of time that are unforeseen to both management and employees.

For example, the following are common workplace injuries:

Cuts	Hearing damage
Broken bones	Vision problems
Sprains and strains	Illness caused by radiation exposure
Repetitive motion disorders	Illness caused by breathing, touching or ingesting unsafe substances
